THE SENTINEL'S FARM MAXIMS. Hog and hominy first, tobacco and cotton afterwards.

The better a farm is worked the less expensive fertilizers are needed.

You can't have much manure without live stock. Devote more attention to this subject. Study your crops and study your soils. You can't raise anything on any kind of land. If you can't pay cash for your fertilizers, you will be doing yourself a service by not buying. Cultivate a small farm thoroughly and it will produce more than a larger farm if allowed to take care of itself.

Make your own fertilizers, and depend less every year upon the commercial guanos, which in many cases are unreliable and expensive.

Read good agricultural papers and swap views with your neighbors. It will do both of you good and you will both learn something from the other, neither of you knew before.'

Don't be prejudiced against laborsaving agricultural implements. Be convinced in your own mind of their merits and wherein they may be a help to your work on the farm, then go and buy one, as soon as you can do so without going in debt. Never go in What Farmers Can Do.

They have voters enough to carry They can effectually put an end to the extertions of railroads, which take one bushel of every two that the farmers raise. They can put ten farmes in Congress and the State Legislature for every one they now have. They can make their own laws in all the States. They can combine themselves into a compact body. They can furnish themselves with a crop report of inestimable valure to hemselves and the country; and They can by so doing protect themselves against speculators.

The discharges were so offensive that I hostate to ment in it. except for the good it may do some other sufferer. I have spent a young fortune from my earnings during my forty years of suffering o obtain relief from the doctors. I have tried patent medicines—every one I could learn of—from the foar corners of the earth, with no relief. And AT LAST (57 years of age) have met with a remedy that has sured me entirely—made mea new man. I weighed 128 pounds and now weigh 148. I used thirteen bottles of medicine, and the only regret I have is that being on the hamble walks of life I may not have influence to prevail on all astarrah sufferers to use what has cured me selves and their community than most of those who work on a more extensive scale. He has only a one horse farm, but this years he made three hundred and fifty bushel of corn, five bales of cotton, one hundred bushels of peas, twenty hundred bundles of fodder, fifty bushels of oats and thirty-five bushels of wheat. The corn was all made on six acres, being nearly sixty bushels to the acres; and such corn! Half a dozen ears of it lie on our table as a dozen ears of it lie on our table as write, and no Kansas or Ohio corn field ever produced their superior. They are leven inches long and nine inches around and compactly filled with large white, and well matured grains; the six ears weighing eight and a quarter pounds. They do our eyes good, and we propose to keep a them to show to those who say that this country is only fit for raising cotton with which to buy the damaged and immature grain of the west. Marl for Poultry. From the Petersbury Rural Messenger. We find the practice of keeping a arge pile of marl in the yard, where the hens have free access to it, is an In this way our poultry get all the lime they need, and they always lay well and more by a good deal than they would without it. We hand it in by the load, and pour it down, and almost daily the hens may be seen picking up the little bits of shell. They seem fend of it, they are nearly always healthy, and we see no soft eggs. We are satisfied that marl is a great We are satisfied that marl is a great benefit to laying fowls. It supplies their system with material for making hard, strong shells, and we think it causes them to lay more eggs on the same amount of feed than they would without it. We have no doubt, too, that our poultry are healthier on ac-count of the marl. Lime is useful to an animal in many ways and we have an animal in many ways, and we have an idea that a hen knows what is good for her and will not eat more lime than is needed.

Peatry Pronts.

From the Perry, Ga., Home Journal.

There is a prosperous farmer near Perry who proposes to find out this year exactly the worth of a flock of chickens on a farm. He has about 60 hens, and the large number of eggs being gathered new indicates that there is money in poultry. He proposes to keep strict account of every item of expense, as well as a full record of the eggs and chickens sold, and also of those consumed at home. From the complete record of the year he will be able to correctly ascertain the relative value of eggs and chickens as marketable commodities. Upon the conclusions to be thus reached he will base his future operations in the poultry business. He is strongly inclined to adopt the artificial method of incubation.

The country is flooded with bogus medicine men, and in a few cases a heavy capital is all they have to sustain their prestige. Numerous cleverly concected certificates are forced upon the unsuspecting, purporting to have "snached from the grave" some poor victim of blood poison or other disease, when to our knowledge the identical persons lay groaning in agony while the public were reading of their remarkable recovery. Another serious offense is the publication of erroneous statements concerning various drogs, such as are daily prescribed by our best physicians, declaring them to be deadly poisons. Iodide of potash, which receive their greatest condemnation, when prescribed by physicians and in the proper combination with certain compound, is not only harmless, but forms one of the most powerful antagonists to blood poison known to the medical world. B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) contains Iodide of potash.

This company hold hundreds of genuine certificates from persons who have been cured of various diseases arising from an impure state various diseases arising from an impure state of the blood by the use of B. B. B. The question now is, if Iodide of potash is such a terrible enemy to health, why is it that the Blod Balm Co. have made within two years the most gigantic sales and cures ever before made on American soil?
